Committee Fears Court Move
Would Make Dr. Townsend
"Martyr"

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(UP)—House leaders today demanded swift punishment of Dr. Francis W. Townsend for contempt in refusing to testify before the old age pension investigation.

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and Majority Leader William E. Borah, D. Ala., agreed that Townsend's "walkout" action was open defiance of the house.

Their statements came as Chairman C. Jasper Bell, D. Mo., announced he would call his committee into executive session tomorrow to attempt to map a procedure method.

May Become "Martyr"

The committee has been in a dilemma, fearing that any action it might take would put the 70-year-old physician in a "martyr" role before his followers.

Meanwhile, five other Townsend leaders have been summoned to appear before the committee, beginning tomorrow. But Dr. Townsend has ordered them not to testify. They are Dr. Clinton Wunder, eastern regional manager, Jack Kiefer, midwest national director, and A. J. Wright, Ohio manager, all directors, and Charles M. Hawks, Massachusetts state manager, and Edward J. Margrett, California state area manager.

May Cite All

Wunder telegraphed that he would arrive in Washington tonight. He did not mention whether he would testify. Bell threatened to take contempt citation action against them if they fail to appear and asserted he would make public evidence his agents have amassed, regardless of whether they testified.

Survivor of Lake Tragedy Tells How His Four Companions Went to Death

BELLE RIVER, Ont., May 25.—(UP)—A U. S. army plane flying over Lake St. Clair sighted an overturned boat with one man clinging to it. He had clung there for 24 hours while one by one his four companions gave up the fight and slipped off to death.

The tragedy occurred 15 miles east of Detroit and one mile from the Canadian shore.

The party—made up of William Barlow, 25, Arnold Weal, 33, Clifford McLeod, 30, Phillip Brinkus, 27, and Elmer Reagin, 27, all employed in the same factory set sail from Detroit in Barlow's 24-foot sloop at noon Saturday.

Sloop Turned Over
A mile off the Canadian shore a sudden squall flipped the sloop bottom-side up, dumping all five into the lake. They swam to the floating hulk and clung to it. They saw the shore, even saw persons on the beach, but no amount of shouting and waving attracted attention to their plight.

The accident occurred at 4:30 p. m. Three hours later, as dusk settled, McLeod said:

"I'm going to swim ashore."

He struck out. The others, watching, saw him disappear beneath the surface a few hundred yards away.

Brinkus called to him. To his companions he seemed hysterical.

Soon there was no doubt of it. Crying, he pushed away from the boat and started swimming frantically toward the spot where McLeod disappeared.

"Don't do it," Barlow shouted. Brinkus swam faster and Barlow set out in pursuit. It did nothing but increase his speed. Within minutes Brinkus disappeared and Barlow, badly shaken and exhausted, swam back to the wreck.

By pushing and pulling one another, Barlow, Weal and Reagin got up on top of the keel and there, through the night, talked of food, women, and home, sleeping fitfully for short intervals. The night seemed interminable, but finally light spread over the lake and far in the distance they saw clearly the shore. The shouted and waved without result. Finally all were exhausted and stretched out full length over the keel.

Found Others Gone
At 5:30 a. m., he estimated, Reagin closed his eyes, convinced he was going to die and not caring. In minutes, he was sound asleep. Hours later—about 3:30 p. m. He awoke with a start, sat up, rubbed his eyes. He was alone. The lake lapped gently against the boat, there was no sign of Weal or Barlow.

An hour later, the army plane flew overhead. It was one of several sent out yesterday afternoon to look for the missing boat. Reagin stood up, jerked off his shirt, began waving it. But Lieut. Paul Blanchard, its pilot, already had sighted him. He landed at Belle River, and sent out a boat to take him ashore.

Today Reagin was recovering in a hospital. His condition was not considered serious. Canadian and American authorities were watching the lake shores for the bodies of the four lost men. Detroit police removed two bodies from the lake last night, but they were not identified immediately.

F. D. R. TO LEAVE RAILROAD TASK

Systems Expected to Find
Own Way to Prosperity

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(UP)—Best available information indicated today that the new Deal has decided definitely to keep hands off the railroads, allow the office of federal co-ordinator of transportation to expire, and give the carriers their sought-for chance of working out their own salvation.

The United Press was informed that President Roosevelt has delivered a note to his transportation coordinator, Joseph B. Eastman, telling him to drop all plans for rail consolidations until after the political campaigns.

"And by then there will be no transportation coordinator," said the informant. "Eastman's office expires automatically on June 16 and it will not be extended."

The signature by rail labor and capital at the White House last week of an agreement providing for dismissal compensation for any railroad men losing their jobs because of consolidations thus became more than a generous gesture in the opinion of some persons, for the time being at least, familiar with the situation.

FOUR RECOUNT STORY OF RESCUE FROM LAKE

TOLEDO, May 25—(UP)—Four amateur sailors who set out Sunday in their home-made boat to sail Lake Erie, recounted today how they were rescued when their craft tipped over and sank between Turtle Island and the Crib light.

The four are Adolph Seeger, Sr., vice-president of the Seeger Device Company; his son, Adolph, Jr., high school senior; Edwood Hodge, 20, and Paul J. Kohn, 15.

They were rescued by August Eger, who, with a dozen guests, witnessed the accident while sailing his boat, The Irene, a mile away.

HIGH COURT HITS 1934 ACT TO AID MUNICIPAL DEBTS

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The Supreme Court today condemned the Municipal Bankruptcy act of 1934, designed to permit incorporated municipalities, drainage, irrigation and water improvement districts to re-organize their bonded indebtedness. The vote was 5 to 4.

The decision was handed down in the case involving reorganization of the Cameron-co, Texas, water district. While the case involved only application of the act to this one district, the terms of the decision were such that it left no doubt, it applied to the act as a whole.

CASEY MARION, a number of years ago, was taking a trip east by rail. He struggled into the train with two large suitcases. After much trouble he managed to heave them on to the luggage rack, while the other passengers edged away expecting them to come crashing down at any minute.

"Er-I say!" cried the fellow in the corner seat, as he eyed the suitcases nervously. "do you think they are safe up there?"

"Sure," replied Casey cheerfully. "they are both locked."

ARE YOU WEAK, DEPRESSED?

POOR appetite, indigestion, gassy, sour stomach, dizzy spells, from causes that can be relieved by a tonic have been overcome by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It stimulates the appetite, improves the action of the stomach, makes the food digest better. Mrs. Elizabeth Reeder of 1523 W. Florida St., Evansville, Ind., said: "I found Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to be excellent as a tonic and system builder. I used it some years ago at a time when I felt badly. I was weak and depressed and my appetite was so poor. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery did me a great deal of good for it helped to strengthen me and gave me a splendid appetite." ## BLEEFELD, JAILED IN WENDEL CASE, DIES IN GOTHAM

NEW YORK, May 25—(UP)—Death of one of the six men indicted in the kidnapping of Paul H. Wendel, whose confession to the Lindbergh kidnapping delayed the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, will not delay prosecution of the other five, authorities intimated today.

Harry Bleefer, 61, died last night from a complication of diseases. He had been ill since his arrest more than a month ago when he was released on $7500 bond. A week ago his condition became critical and he was taken to a hospital.

Bleefer, his son, his son-in-law, Martin Schlossman, Harry Weiss, and Ellis H. Parker, Jr., son of the famous New Jersey rural detective, all were indicted, charged with kidnapping Wendel and torturing him to extract a false confession. Parker still is a fugitive.

Let's take it for granted that you have previously sent in an entry in the weekly recipe contest sponsored by Circleville merchants and the Herald. CREAMED MEAT OR FISH IN CROUSTADES
To Make Croustades—Cut slices of bread 1 1/4 to 2 inches thick and remove crusts. Cut slices into diamonds, triangles, squares or any desired shape. Form into cases by carefully moving center crumb, leaving a wall around sides and bottom about 1/4 inch thick. Place these cases on a flat baking sheet in a slow oven, 300° F., to dry and begin to toast. Before they become brown, take from oven and brush with melted butter. Then return to oven to brown.

For Croustades decorated with parsley, brush the sides and top with egg white beaten until fluffy (in place of the butter). Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley. Then return the croustades to the oven to become delicately browned. Croustades may be fried in deep fat, instead of toasted in the oven.

Croustades may be made any size desired. If generous in size serve one to a person filling the center with creamed fish, meat or any desired filling.

Filling for 6 diamond shaped Croustades, 2 1/4 inches: Melt 1/2 white sauce by melting 6 tbsp. butter in sauce pan and blending in 6 tbsp. flour, 1 tsp. salt and 1/4 tsp. pepper. Add 2 cups milk, stirring constantly. Remove from fire for a few minutes and stir to prevent lumping. Return to fire and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. (Cook 10 minutes over direct flame, 20 minutes in double boiler to eliminate raw taste.)

Add a one-pound can of tuna fish or salmon, or other meat food, or cooked veal or other meat. Flake the fish, cut the meat into rather large pieces. Season to taste.

 to the memory of those brave men of America who gave their lives for this land of ours. With the exception of Christmas, more respect than Memorial Day. It is a solemn event; should be solemnly observed.

 Circleville's merchants will close their day, because Saturday is their most profitable day of the week.

Residents of the city and district are urged to do their week-end shopping Friday and Friday evening. Saturday's business hours will be observed then and in order to make the event more attractive most of the city's merchants are preparing special bargain offerings.

 the time to inspect your American flag and

JUNE WEDDINGS

REPORTS throughout the country indicate that June weddings of 1936 will exceed in number those of any June in several years. Among all the evidences of recovery this is perhaps the most conclusive.
 When a couple take out a license to marry you do not need an investigation by the department of labor to ascertain that somewhere, involved in the arrangement, is a job. The man has a job, or the girl has a job, or the parents or brothers or friends of one or the other have jobs that can be depended on to furnish a flat and keep bread in the occupants' mouths.

Jobs are still not as stable as they were,
 and cautious elderly folks, deploring the small margin of safety, may disapprove of many of the weddings. But they do that in the best of times. What bride's parents were ever convinced that the groom could support her? Fortunately for the survival of the institution of matrimony, the couple directly concerned are more venturesome.
 They believed that two can live as cheaply as one; and, whether they can or not, they willingly take a chance, since in their state of mind they usually feel that separately they can hardly continue to live at all.

Let the June weddings increase. And let the wedding march, for want of a better be that jaunty tune, "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?"

World At A Glance

POWERFUL INTERESTS still have powerful sway in Washington.
 That is the word emanating from the forces trying to bring about an investigation of rail-holding companies.

The public has 20 billion dollars invested in railroads, according to Washington estimates. The railroads, of course, have been heavily overcapitalized, "watered" in the past. That is their trouble now. But, worse, the watering has continued through holding companies, liberals assert.

And the chief offender has been the Van Sweringen interests, the liberals charge.

The Van Sweringen roads have blocked every effort by which the government could unseat the keins of their empire, much of which has gone through reorganization with terrible loss to the investor.

LOOKED

Last year, the senate's interstate commerce committee of 29 members, with Senator Wheeler of Montana as chairman, unanimously recommended that the senate not $25,000 to its special committee investigating railroads.

The senate's auditing committee gave consent to the measure, but a special senate committee employed as its counsel a brilliant young lawyer of New York, who has specialized in "The Investor's Guide" and the investor does not proceed.

BEHIND SCENES IN GUFFEY CASE

WASHINGTON—Exactly what took place in the Supreme Court during the 68 days of secret deliberation on the Guffey coal case, of course no one but the nine Justices knows.

But attorneys who followed this and other New Deal cases closely say there is considerable external evidence of what happened behind the scenes before the three opinions in the Guffey case saw the light of day. This is what they think it was:

At the start the Court apparently split 3-3-3. That is, three Justices wanted to hold the law valid, three to rule it out entirely, and three to invalidate the labor sections, but approve the price control provisions. The last was the position taken by Chief Justice Hughes in his individual opinion.

But a 3-3-3 division would have stalemated the case and allowed the divergent lower court decisions to remain in force. It would have created widespread confusion and chaos. In Kentucky, for example, a federal court had thrown out the entire law. But in the District of Columbia, only the labor provisions had been ruled out.

Perhaps even more important, the prestige of the Court was at stake. A deadlock would have played directly into the hands of its critics, who claim that the Justices' economic and political views, not law, determine their rulings.

So, according to the analyzers, there ensued some hours trading among the six Justices who favored some kind of decree against the Act.

The three Justices who wanted to toss out the entire law proposing tempering their stand, to the extent of not rendering final judgment on the price fixing sections, but merely holding them illegal in this specific instance because they were wrapped up with the unconstitutional labor provisions.

By this concession, two of the three Justices who favored the price fixing features presumably were induced to go along with the three die-hards.

In confirmation of this theory the legalists cite three points:

First: Justice Sutherland's majority opinion shows signs of being a "patchwork" decision; that is, more than one pen had a hand in writing it.

Second: Sutherland, in one portion of his opinion, says specifically that he will pass on the constitutionality of the price-fixing sections later in his decision. Yet when he finally reaches this part of the law he withholds final judgment, saying, "The price-fixing provisions of the code are thus disposed of without coming to the question of their constitutionality..."

Finally: the great length of time it took the Court to act upon the case—68 days—one of the longest periods of chamber debate in recent Court history.

Extremists are necessary. You may say the fish weighed ten pounds to make people believe it weighed three.

Lady, Be Gallant

By MARIE BLIZARD

COPYRIGHT, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST

Joan Spencer, school teacher in a small town, is shocked to learn from her married sister, Dorothy, with whom she lives, that Stephen Winslow, a young physician practicing in New York, has announced his engagement. She and Win had expected to be married.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 2

"ALL RIGHT, Edward. We'll try it tomorrow. It's not so pronounced, but I don't know what I can do about it. Maybe tomorrow we can find an n somewhere. Wait a minute... how many times have I told you not to leave papers sticking out of your book?" Joan Spencer caught her voice as it ran upwards and swallowed wearily. For the seventh time that day her eyes traveled to the calendar. Only four days more! Her linen frock was crumpled. Chalk dust choked her. Her skin felt as dry and untidy as her mind. She wrinkled her nose delicately as the warm smell of children and old musty emporiums assailed it. The windows were flung open but the June air wasn't strong enough to blow away the school room odors that left her utterly dejected. Or worse, she thought, because she wasn't as unhappy as she was discontented and Joan hated discontent.

"I was 10 years younger and 30 pounds lighter. I'd take up dancing. Lordy, but I'm sick of 'teacher' in my ears all day." Louise Mears wiped her broad brow and sank into the 'visitor's chair'.

"Cheer up, it'll soon be over. Four days more!" Joan wore the expression of a prisoner going out into an unfriendly world.

"Joan, how would you like to come up to Maine with me and see my folks for a couple of weeks? It would be a change from this place."

Joan looked at her archly. "Would you say about July first?"

"That would be a fine time," Louise answered too quickly.

"Hmum. Yes. Win would be bringing his fiancée home for the Fourth. 'Louise, you're sweet but I wish you'd stop being sorry for me and being angry with Win. It wasn't quite fair but, after all, maybe he felt the same way I did and that's an understanding,' wasn't really an engagement?"

"Well, I wouldn't call it very gallant of him," Louise emphasized her feeling with a contemptuous expression.

"Oh, Louise, you're so unworried. Gentlemen aren't supposed to be gallant any more. It's up to the girls these days. I guess it's easier for us."

"That's what you think?"

"I'd let you in on a secret. I don't think any more. I'm so tired of trying to think if it is better to promote Buddy Johnson or keep him in the second grade for the third grade. I think I'll take a course at the college."

"Got all your other promotions finished? And did you locate a first edition of that book for Mr. Evans?"

"Good heavens no! I've done everything I could think of. I even wrote to the Week-End Review of Literature. They have a personal column you know but I haven't heard yet. He'll just have to get a new one I guess."

Mr. Evans, county superintendent, made an annual award to the graduate with highest honors, of a first edition of poetry.

Louise remarked:

"It all makes for excitement anyway. Let's get out of this stuffy place. I'm trying for something cool to wash the dust down my throat. But no ice cream, mind you. It's do or die with me since I started this reducing campaign and by next autumn I'm going to be so slim I won't be able to see my own shadow."

Louise patted her round waistline like a football. "You're not talking like yourself at all! You know what's the matter with you?"

"If you do, you're smart, my pet, because I'm sure I don't," Joan bent over her desk.

"Whatever it is, it's Win," Louise

Joan's eyes were shining when she finished.

said daringly; she was still a little afraid to say things too personal to Joan.

"I knew you were going to say that," Joan answered tensely. "You and Dorothy and Jim. They're not even mentioning his name. They're so sorry for me. Dorothy brought my breakfast to my room one morning and I hurled a piece of toast at her."

"All right, you don't want sympathy. But just the same I think you ought to talk it out. You'll feel better and clear the air."

"There isn't anything to 'talk out.' That's all over. Win is engaged to another girl and that's really all right with me. I was in love with him once and then I got to being used to him and loving him, too. But the bloom was slightly off. It was a shock but I realize that it really didn't hurt. Maybe my pride did get a little bump."

"Now, that makes sense! Wounded vanity and pride with a bump is just as effective as a broken heart."

"Do you know anything about a broken heart?" Joan asked, hoping to change the subject.

"Sort of," Louise answered dreamily. "First year I came back from normal school I had sort of... well, Paul Heath took me out and came to supper every Sunday night, you know."

Joan did know. She knew all the little ways that "an understanding" grew up in small towns, all the little ways a courtship progressed with the principals helplessly thrown at each other. She wished that she could think that she and Win had started that way, but they hadn't. Win and she were two people apart from all the rest in those days. And then after a while, because they were too poor to marry and because Win had to get his start in medicine...

"But when he married Helen, I guess I got a shock, too."

Joan recalled herself from her memories. "But Helen's been dead two years."

"So what? He's got two kids and a good housekeeper and I've gained 30 pounds," Louise sighed.

"Ah, you've given me a new interest, Louise! We'll campaign for a husband for you. Now, look here, this summer, you're going to swim, tennis, exercise morning and night. Then when you're down to normal size, we'll go to New York and buy you some clothes. Won't that be fun?"

"That'll be lots of fun and if we're really going to do that, I suppose I might have one farewell fudge sundae because I'm fangled. So let's get out of this ancient place and go where there is life and gaiety."

"There's a letter for you, honey," Joan's sister told her at supper time and hastily retreated to her small kitchen. She didn't want Joan to look at her with a question in her eyes. The letter, she knew, was not from Win. Indeed, there had been no letter from him and she pondered on it unhappily until Joan's shout from the living room brought an end to it.

"Dorothy! Come in and listen. To this. It's mad! It's two letters! One from the Week-End Review of Literature and one from Julian Sloane. Listen:

"Dear Miss Spencer: Hereafter we are forwarding to you a letter from Mr. Julian Sloane regarding your application which ran in the personal column of the Week-End Review of Literature. Will you please be kind enough to let us know the results?"

"Mad? I should say it is. What kind of an application did you run in that magazine?" Dorothy asked.

"I didn't, but I did have a note in asking for a first edition for Mr. Evans. But listen to this, this is the letter from Julian Sloane. Dorothy, he's the famous author and playwright!"

"Dear Miss Spencer: I am very much impressed with your qualifications and would like to have you run out here to The Willows to talk it over. I should prefer a secretary who will reside here, at least until October, since my working hours are irregular. I shall be happy to reimburse you for travel expenses and should like you to get here some time Saturday. Will you please telegraph me?"

"Sincerely, 'JULIAN SLOANE'"

Joan's eyes were shining when she finished.

"Dorothy, isn't it wonderful! There's something funny somewhere but who am I to question Fate?"

Dorothy picked up the envelope Joan had dropped. "Here's the answer, Joan. It's addressed to Miss JANE Spencer. It isn't for you at all. What are you going to do about it?"

For an instant Joan's thoughts darted through her head. Then:

"Do about it? Why, I'm going to The Willows on Saturday!"

A PLAYER'S THOUGHTS

MANY ARE interested in a player's thoughts, as he bids and plays important holdings. While it is still fresh in memory, we will run over mental activities while I bid and played South's cards last evening. East dealt and passed. Both sides were vulnerable. Opponents were total strangers. The occasion was a 10-table duplicate, held at the New York Athletic club. As I sorted my hand I saw a minimum of nine tricks in my own cards, even if I had to lose two spade tricks and two club tricks. Nothing but an even distribution of spades or black honors in dummy would do me any good. I wanted above all things to know whether my partner held at least two spades and at least one of the two missing club honors. My partner was familiar with responses to an opening 2-bid, but not with those to an opening 3-bid. I had to use the former, intending to bid game any way, and to try a small slam if partner showed real strength.

Bidding went: South, 2-Spades; North, 3-Hearts, showing a biddable suit and at least one quick trick. Partner's possession of both red suits would do me no good unless I had access to dummy and unless I could discard all my clubs. What I needed was help in the black suits. There were chances of 33 in 57 for partner to hold at least the Ace or K of clubs, and the same chances for him to hold either Q or J of spades. The odds were 1 to 1 I ran over dummy's hand, partner to hold at least one of the four black honors I wanted. There should be at least game. Bidding continued, South, 3-Spades; North, 3-No Trumps, almost certainly showing that dummy was not void of spades; South, 4-Clubs; North, 5-Clubs, giving me sufficient encouragement to take an even chance for a small slam, by bidding 6-Spades, which East doubled.

There really was nothing much to the play. The interest came in reasoning out even chances for top score, by bidding 6. Everyone else bid 4, and made 6. The opening lead was the Q of diamonds. I was led with my lone Ace. I led off the K of spades. West showed out. Now came the only real test of my ability to make my bid. Who held the missing K of clubs? I led the Q of clubs. West covered with the K. Dummy's Ace won. Dummy's 9 of spades was led through West's Q-J-6. My Ace picked up his J, but he had to make his Q of spades, for the only defensive trick. Had West not covered with his K of clubs, on the first round of the suit, a low club would have been led. Either dummy's 9 or Ace, according to whether or not the K covered on the second lead, would have given access to dummy, to lead a trump. As the cards were held the small slam could not have been defeated.

Popular Health Beliefs Incorrect Says Doctor

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

(1) THAT IT is more dangerous to prick oneself with a pin than a needle.

This is an old one. It goes back pretty near to the beginning of pins and needles. There was a general idea that the metal of the pin was of a poisonous character.

There seems to be a right and a wrong way to draw the bath water. The way everybody does it is wrong. That is, if inquiries among 250 persons are correctly answered.

The usual way of drawing a bath is to turn on hot and cold water together until the water reaches a certain level. This fills the bathroom with a humid, superheated air which makes the bather uncomfortable, brings on a perspiration which takes some time to wear off. Going from the bathroom to other colder rooms, or standing around undressed to "cool off" makes for colds and sinus.

The correct way to draw water for a bath, according to Dr. August A. Thomsen ("Don't believe it," says the doctor) is to allow the cold water to flow into the tub until the desired level is reached. Then shut it off. Turn on the hot water, mix it thoroughly until the desired temperature is reached. Then your bath is ready.

And if you get a cold it will be from some other cause. I don't seem to be able to learn to do anything right.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendenning can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Cure of the Hair and Skin."

(2) That a boil purifies the system. A boil has nothing to do with purification at all. It is caused by a germ getting inside the outer layer of the skin. It doesn't draw any poison from the various parts of the body.

Equally foolish was the notion that an attack of typhoid fever cleaned you all up for a while. That you were much healthier than before the attack. You had simply been in bed for six weeks, which is always good for you, and you had been immunized by typhoid vaccination, which brings up all the immunity of the body, and you were so weak you mistook it for feeling good!

(3) That getting an eruption out on the surface of the body is bringing a disease to a head.

I think it must have been measles that made all the grandmothers believe this. It is true that when the eruption comes out in measles the patient looks worse, but feels better.

Brings It to Head. That getting an eruption out on the surface of the body is bringing a disease to a head.

One of the most anticipated parties of early summer was the banquet for the alumni of the Washington-twp school held in the American hotel coffee shop Saturday evening.

The alumni was organized in 1927 and most of its members are still residents of Pickaway-co.

Fifty-eight members and guests enjoyed this annual affair. A bountiful two-course dinner was served at long tables centered with large vases of pink peonies, with lighted tapers adding to the pink and white appointments.

Sue Collins, 8, Wins Romberg Program

Star to Be Master of Ceremonies for Monday Evening Hour; Vallee for Bowes

Arthur Romberg has planned a novelty for his broadcast. He has asked Sue Collins, eight-year-old screen star, master of ceremonies and "run" the broadcast. This means Sue will tell the audience about the numbers which will be played and the orchestra will play and "explain" them in her own way. She will be a very different kind of music commentator. The orchestra, with Romberg conducting, will be heard in a variety of numbers light and the classics. Little Sue may even pick one of the numbers which she likes best. The program will be broadcast on the WEAP-NBC network at 8 p. m. (EST).

RADIO SETS which will enable the listener to tune in with accuracy on the broadcast of major stations throughout the world simply by the pressing of a button can be purchased within the next few days, according to a radio official.

A prophecy is quoted from a book by Arthur Van Dyck of Radio Corporation of America before the American inclusion of so-called all-reception in sound broadcast is, perhaps, the most important of recent developments in the branch of radio activity," Van Dyck said, in effect.

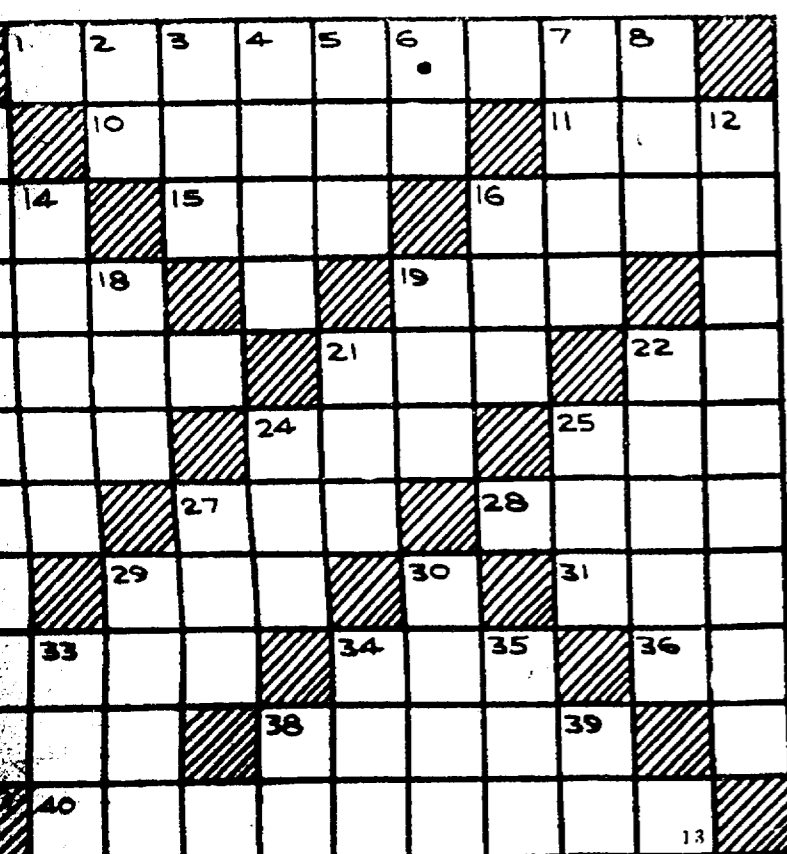

"This development reaches its apex within the next few years, the listener may sit in his seat and by the simple pressing of buttons marked 'Paris,' 'Berlin' and so on, listen to programs originating from those distant world capitals as satisfactorily as to programs originating from his own neighborhood."

RADIO STATION DEKKE is another than our new friend from the skies, the station which is being built in the Hindenburg.

It is almost exact duplicates of the Hindenburg station, is legally only eight years old. He was born Feb. 29, 1904, a real leap year baby. Jerry Belcher (Vox Pop interviewer) and the new Mrs. Belcher first met in New York, though both are natives of the same residential section in Houston, Tex. NBC will attempt to have the Dionne quintuplets list a "hello" to you over a network on May 28, which is their second anniversary. Dr. Allan Dafee will talk on the same program. One of the leading "villainesses" of the air is Betty Worth. She not only plays the "toughie" roles on those Court of Human Relations broadcasts, but has been a "bad girl" on many other programs. That southern softness in the voice of Margaret McGrae (Your Hit Parade singer) is natural; she is a native of South Carolina.

If or when the popularity of the amateur hour wanes, the great Rudy Vallee may replace Walter Winchell's summer vacation the gossip columnist will be replaced by Corolla Skinner. But Walter Winchell's back in the early autumn. Lombardo's present program is the air in the air. That Children's Hour (Sunday) program is 12 years old, dating from WJZ in 1924. Dorothy Dorsey, whose music you heard on the Bing Crosby program,

Sue Collins, 8, Wins Romberg Program

Star to Be Master of Ceremonies for Monday Evening Hour; Vallee for Bowes

Arthur Romberg has planned a novelty for his broadcast. He has asked Cora Sue Collins, eight-year-old screen star, to master of ceremonies and "run" the broadcast. This means Sue will tell the audience about the numbers which will be played and the orchestra will play and "explain" them in her own way. She will be a very different kind of music commentator. The orchestra, with Romberg conducting, will be heard in a variety of numbers light and the classics. Little Sue may even pick one of the numbers which she likes best to be broadcast.

WEAF-NBC network at 8 p. m. (EST).

RADIO SETS
RADIO SETS which will enable listener to tune in with accuracy on the broadcast of major stations throughout the world simply by the pressing of a button may be commensurate within the not-too-future, according to a radio official.

A prophecy is quoted from a book by Arthur Van Dyck of the American Corporation of America before the American Institute of Radio Engineers.

Inclusion of so-called all-reception in sound broadcast is, perhaps, the most important of recent developments in the branch of radio activity," Van Dyck said, in effect.

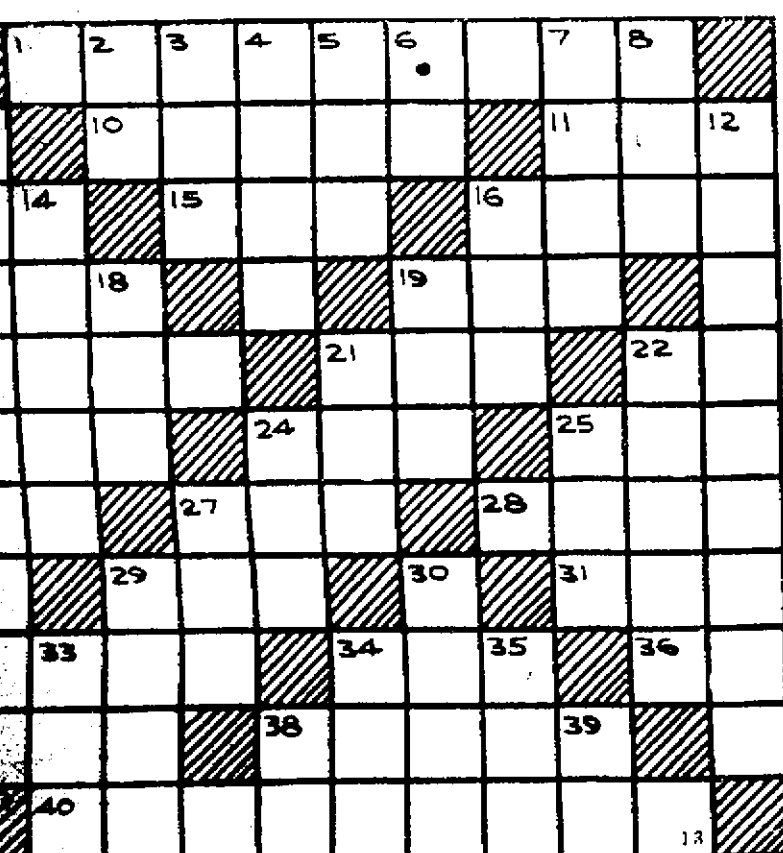

This development reaches perhaps within the next few years, the listener may sit in his set and by the simple pressing of buttons marked "Paris," "Berlin" and so on, listen to programs originating from those distant world capitals as satisfactorily as to programs originating from his own stations.

RADIO STATION DEKKE is another than our new friend from the skies, the Spelling Handburg.

Listeners from the Hindens are almost exact duplicates of those from land stations. The same obstacles are overcome by the same means. The same are the same and rehearsals held on the ship before its special trip.

... If or when the popular amateur hour wanes, the minor Rudy Vallee may replace the major Bowes on Monday evening program. ... Walter Winchell's summer vacation the gossip columnist will be replaced by Cora Sue Collins. But Walter Winchell back in the early autumn, Lombardo's present program is 12 years old. That Children's Hour program is 12 years old. That Dorsey, whose music you hear on the Bing Crosby program,

F. Mavis, service director, believed the experiment is one of its kind ever conducted in Circleville. In previous years black top streets were patched over completely torn up. Due to severe winter and thaws city will be a waste of money on some

PROBERS CLAIM 'BLACK LEGION' EXTENDS TO OHIO

strength was meagre. Harry A.
Columbus, chief investigator for Wayne-co Prosecutor Duncan C.
McCrea, said he had evidence that strong vigilante organizations exist in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Indiana.

"Michigan, Ohio and Indiana combine the western division of the Black Legion," he explained.
"It is headed by V. F. (Bert) Effenger of Indiana."

National commander of the group is William Shepherd, known as "Shotgun" Shepherd, who makes his home "somewhere along the Ohio-West Virginia border."

Divided in Brigades

Each state in which the Black Legion exists is divided into brigades, Columbus said. Commanding each brigade is a "brigadier-general" who is responsible only to the state commander. Each city organization is headed by a "colonel," and other officers, as in the army, range downward through the ranks of major, captain, lieutenant, sergeant, corporal and private.

From Black Legion members under arrest in Detroit in connection with the slaying of Charles A. Poole, came the information that the organization "extends to every major city in the United States and its members are persons of both high and low degree."
Members said they did not know how many thousands were members of the national organization.

Members of the Legion were forced to purchase black robes and hoods, in which were sewn the familiar skull and cross-bones. Columbus said the robes were sold by leaders for $5.75 to $7.00 each, although their cost did not exceed $2.25.

PRISON GUARD JAILED

JACKSON, Mich., May 25.—
(UP)—A two-page typewritten history of the Black Legion, terroristic organization now under investigation in three Michigan counties, was found in the possession of Ray Ernest, state prison guard, arrested and charged with being a leader in the band.
